The recent news reports of killer bees making their way from South America to North America have attracted a lot of attention. Killer bees are much misunderstood creatures. They are generally believed to eagerly kill humans. However, the truth is that killer bees avoid any contact with the outside world and that their aggression may have been overstated.

The killer bee is a hybrid of the mild European honeybee and the aggressive African bee. It was created when the African bees were imported into Brazil in 1955 because their aggressive nature was regarded as an advantage: they were much more productive. Compared with the European bees, they spent a higher percentage of their time working and continued working longer in the bad weather conditions.

Killer bees have a bad reputation for attacking humans. Yet, they are actually not as aggressive as pure African bees. According to experts, a killer bee stings only when it is being disturbed, and all the tragedies result from a chemical cause. After an annoyed bee stings, it leaves its stinger in the victim’s wound. Inside the stinger is a chemical called acetate, which has an odor to attract other bees. When these bees are attracted to the victim, the latter tends to panic and waves his or her arms, only to offend the bees more. The victim thus ends up getting more stings, which create more of the chemical acetate and appeal to even more bees. That’s how the killer bee has gotten its bad reputation.

32. The main idea of the passage is that killer bees _____.
(A) have moved rapidly through USA
(B) have been in the news a lot recently
(C) are a hybrid rather than a pure breed
(D) are not as aggressive as their reputation
33. Why were African bees considered beneficial?
(A) They were aggressive and productive.
(B) They produced a unique type of honey.
(C) They spent much time attacking victims.
(D) They tended to hide from terrible weather.
34. In the first paragraph, the word “overstated” can be replaced by _____.
(A) explored
(B) experienced
(C) exaggerated
(D) examined
35. According to the passage, _____ is NOT a contributing factor in a killer bee’s attack.
(A) panic from the victims
(B) the aggression in nature
(C) an odorous chemical
(D) disturbance of the bees
36. It can be inferred from the passage that killer bees _____.
(A) were carried from Africa to Brazil in 1955
(B) are less aggressive than African bees
(C) traveled from Africa to North America
(D) attack whatever they come across

Though tiny and humble, we grass plants occupy one-fifth of the continents on earth. We have more than six thousand species, much more than any other plants in the world. Our structure is very simple: we have only one stem, a few leaves and shallow roots. Our ability to survive enables us to best adapt to any harsh environments. Therefore, we are here, there and everywhere: in the deserts, at the North and South Poles, up on the highest mountains and down in the deepest waters.

Knowing nothing about us, people believe that we do not flower. They do not know that our flowers are unique: they have no color or smell, yet a single grass plant sometimes has fifty million pollen grains. When coming, the wind, our match-maker, brings us on a wedding dance. Carried by the air current, our pollen rises four thousand feet high and flies thousands of miles away to meet the lovers.

Humans always call themselves the sons of the earth, but it is we that take nutrients out of soil to be the main food source on earth. In spring, we begin to absorb minerals from the soil to produce nutrients and then store most of them in our seeds. Having found out this secret in ancient times, human ancestors started to live on our seeds and feed our stems and roots to their livestock. Later on, they chose some of us, such as rice and wheat, and began to grow them on a large scale. With a sufficient food supply, they began to develop a wide variety of cultures all over the world. Therefore, it’s fair to say that we did help humans create their civilization.

37. The passage is mainly about the reason why _____.
 (A) grasses can survive in the extreme weather
 (B) grasses are essential for human civilization
 (C) humans know very little about grasses
 (D) humans feed their livestock with grasses
38. Based on the passage, which statement about the pollen is NOT true?
 (A) It carries the air current.
 (B) It is ready to meet its love.
 (C) It flies thousands of miles away.
 (D) It rises four thousand feet high.
39. The word “adapt” in the first paragraph is the closest in meaning to “_____.”
 (A) adjust
 (B) adopt
 (C) advise
 (D) addict
40. Which of the following statements can NOT be inferred from the last paragraph?
 (A) Rice and wheat originate from grasses.
 (B) Humans benefit a great deal from grasses.
 (C) Grasses are actually the sons of the earth.
 (D) Humans learn how to intake minerals first.
41. Which of the following statements is TRUE?
 (A) People generally believe that grasses flower.
 (B) The sun brings grasses for a wedding dance.
 (C) The grass is composed of three different parts.
 (D) We cannot find grasses on mountain peaks.
